

THE 2016 LANDSCAPE SHOW

Jamie Ross Garden and Landscape Design

Jamie Ross is a graduate of The Garden Design School (GDS) in Boston, MA, one of the foremost garden schools in the U.S. and Europe. The design courses were mostly taught by the school founders, Moira Farnham and Robin Templar Williams, both highly accomplished and respected international garden designers. Other courses were taught by leading experts in specialize aspects of garden design.

Jamie was on a team of five GDS graduates who participated in a design/build garden for the Boston Flower Show in 2012. The team was honored with five blue ribbon awards. Jamie is also a graduate of the Wedgworth Leadership Institute for Agriculture & Natural Resources, Class VIII at the University of Florida. She holds a Certified Horticultural Professional designation with Florida Nursery, Growers & Landscape Association (FNGLA).

Raised with a horticultural foundation, Jamie grew up in a small farming community, Corder, Missouri. Her father, Eric Heimsoth, founded an agriculture company, Heimsoth Agriculture & Services when Jamie was a small child. Fifty years later, the company is still in the family and run by her two sisters and brothers in law. Jamie is a member of FNGLA. She was the local chapter President in 2013-14. In 2010, she was honored as the Secretary of the Year.